

Maxwell Pays Visit To State Golf Open

Perry Maxwell, nationally-known golf course architect, dropped in Saturday to watch some of the boys playing in the state open on the Oklahoma City Country club course. Maxwell designed the Country club and also the Twin Hills' layout.

Just returned from Iowa State where he has completed the beautiful college layout for George Veenker, director of athletics, Maxwell commented on the tricky ninth green: "The pitch and run shot can be used to good effect here and that's what is needed—more headwork and less clubwork—most players have mastered the high pitch shot."
