

CHICKASAW REFINERY COMPANY ENTERTAINED WITH OLDTIME BANQUET

The Chickasaw Refinery Company's stockholders entertained their friends at an elaborate old fashioned barbecue, given at the company's plant, in industrial addition, Wednesday afternoon.

Many of the stockholders, with their wives and friends gathered at the park in which is located the plant, following the annual meeting, and partook of a repast which was abundant in supply.

There was ample and to spare for all, including the plant employes, who were guests of the company.

Led by James Cotner, of New York, at one time mayor of Ardmore, and James Barron, formerly of Chicago, but now acting secretary of the Ardmore Chamber of Commerce, the hungry guests executed some wonderful feats in gastronomic drilling, which excited the admiration and wonder of those present who were endowed with only normal appetites.

At the stockholders meeting, held in the offices of the company in the von Weiss building, immediately before the barbecue, the following board of directors were selected to serve for the ensuing year:

S. A. Apple, Charles von Weiss, John S. Owens, Errett Dunlap, Perry D. Maxwell, James A. Cotner, all of Ardmore, and Ernest L. Nye, of New York.

Officers to serve for the year will be elected at the meeting and organization of the directorate, which will possibly be today.
