

Robert Hunter of Pebble Beach, writer, golf architect and golfer of record, will get his second view tomorrow of the site where he will construct the Woodside Country Club, it was announced yesterday.

Hunter returned a few days ago from a six weeks' stay in the east, where he and Dr. Alister Mackenzie, famed English architect with whom he is associated in course construction, conferred on future plans and visited famous eastern layouts.

On his selection as architect some months ago Hunter was enthusiastic on the possibilities presented by the ground. Considerable clearing has taken place since then, however.

Officers of the club and members will inspect the site with Hunter.