

ROTARIANS HOLD JOLLY CHRISTMAS LUNCHEON MEET

C. A. Sessions and his committee devised a program today for the weekly luncheon of the Rotary Club that scintillated the Christmas spirit coupled with the wrecking of train load of fun in the midst of the dining at Hotel Ardmore.

President Dexter used a cow bell as a gavel and no sooner had the meeting started than he took occasion to appoint Perry Maxwell and C. A. Crocket as sergeants at arms. They were presented with big stars as the insignia of their offices. Mr. Maxwell's star bore the initials "F. D." which were evidently for Point Duxton and that of C. A. Crocket "D. H.", which were construed as standing for Dick Hight. These two officers kept perfect peace at the meeting and their services were called for on numerous occasions.

For instance when Frank Sherwood declined to sing a solo because of embarrassment at the presence of a company of ladies, the officers saw to it that he made response and Mr. Sherwood's voice rang out with real Christmas cheer.
